Los Angeles, Cal., December 23.—To-morrow afternoon the curtain is ox-pected to fall on the chief attraction morrow afternoon the curtain is expected to fall on the chief attraction of the Baldwin will contest. The case itself, according to attorneys, may last two or three months, but Mrs. Lillian Turnbull may leave the stand for good when court adjourns to-morrow.

Mrs. Turnbull's four days' cross-examination was completed to-day. All that remains is the laying of foundations for impeaching her testimony regarding the contract marriage, on which is based her daughter's contest for a share of "Lucky" Baldwin's millions.

Mrs. Turnbull to-day denied the authenticity of all the letters which the defense expects to prove she admitted were genuine in her former suit against Baldwin. She admitted that she had been known as Mabel Harrison before she met Baldwin in 1891.

After Mrs. Turnbull had reliterated former assertions that the letters resurrected from her former case against Baldwin contained forged interpolations, Attorney McNab switched to queries concerning the conversations Mrs. Turnbull had with Baldwin relative to the return of the marriage contract.

This certificate, she testified, had
